What is a Cookie?

A cookie is a small data file placed on your computer or mobile device when you visit a website. Cookies help website owners or providers ensure their sites function properly, enhance efficiency (such as remembering your login details), and collect analytics and reporting data.

There are different types of cookies. Cookies set by the website owner or provider are known as “first party cookies”. Cookies set by parties other than the website owner or provider are known as “third-party cookies”. We use third-party cookies to enable external features or functionality, such as advertising and analytics, on our Site. The parties that set these third-party cookies (for example, Google) can recognize your device both when it visits the Site and also when it visits certain other websites.

- Advertise our products and services (where it is permitted).
- Improve our Site experience including customizing your experience through language choices, geo-specific content, and curating content that is relevant to you.

What types of Cookies do we use?

- Necessary Cookies: these are essential in order to enable you to move around the Site, make it usable, and secure. For example, necessary cookies enable page navigation and access to secure areas of the Site.
- Performance and Analytics Cookies: these cookies make it possible to monitor traffic and count visitors to the Site so that we can use the information to improve our Site.
- Functional Cookies: these cookies enable enhanced functionality like remembering your preferences for the next time you visit the Site.

How can I opt-in or opt-out of the Cookies?

We use Cookies and Similar Technologies in accordance with applicable law, taking into account where you are located. In certain jurisdictions we will ask for your consent before Cookies and Similar Technologies are used or offer you an opt-out. You can also control your cookie preferences through your web browser.
